

WEEK OF NOVEMBER 20, 2023

Market Update

---

Quick Hits

1. Report releases: Consumer and producer inflation came in below economist expectations in October.
2. Financial market data: Lower-than-expected inflation data lifted equities and bonds.
3. Looking ahead: This week, we expect data on home sales, durable goods orders, and consumer sentiment.

Report Releases: November 13–17, 2023

Consumer Price Index October (Tuesday)

Headline and core consumer prices increased less than expected in October. This marks the lowest level of year-over-year core consumer price growth since September 2021.

- Prior monthly CPI/core CPI growth: +0.4%/+0.3%
- Expected monthly CPI/core CPI growth: +0.1%/+0.3%
- Actual monthly CPI/core CPI growth: +0%/+0.2%
- Prior year-over-year CPI/core CPI growth: +3.7%/+4.1%
- Expected year-over-year CPI/core CPI growth: +3.3%/+4.1%
- Actual year-over-year CPI/core CPI growth: +3.2%/+4%

Retail Sales October (Wednesday)

Retail sales fell modestly in October, due in part to falling gas prices. Core retail sales, which strip out volatile auto and gas sales, increased 0.1 percent.

- Expected/prior month retail sales monthly change: -0.3%/+0.9%
- Actual retail sales monthly change: -0.1%

National Association of Home Builders Housing Market Index November (Thursday)

Home builder sentiment fell to its lowest level this year as high mortgage rates continued to hurt prospective homebuyer demand. Home builder expectations for future sales fell for the fifth consecutive month.

- Expected/prior month sentiment: 40/40
- Actual sentiment: 34

Building Permits and Housing Starts October (Friday)

Although housing starts and building permits increased more than expected in October, the pace of new home construction remains well below recent highs from early 2022.

- Expected/prior month housing starts monthly change: -0.6%/+3.1%
- Actual housing starts monthly change: +1.9%
- Expected/prior month building permits monthly change: -1.4%/-4.5%
- Actual building permits monthly change: +1.1%

>> The Takeaway

- Consumer and producer inflation showed smaller-than-expected increases in October.
- Housing starts and building permits were higher than expected despite waning home builder sentiment.

Financial Market Data

Equity

Index	Week-to-Date	Month-to-Date	Year-to-Date	12-Month
S&P 500	2.31%	7.77%	19.29%	15.74%
Nasdaq Composite	2.42%	10.01%	35.98%	27.82%

Lower-than-expected consumer and producer inflation reports lifted equities. Small-caps and international markets, two areas that have been hit hard by inflation, were particularly strong. Lower-than-expected inflation data also provided support for the Federal Reserve (Fed) being closer to the end of rate hikes, which should ease currency pressure on international markets. Equities popped to start the week but ended more muted after Walmart's guidance led to questions regarding the strength of consumers.

Fixed Income

Index	Month-to-Date	Year-to-Date	12-Month
U.S. Broad Market	3.40%	0.54%	1.34%
U.S. Treasury	2.62%	-0.17%	0.49%
U.S. Mortgages	4.17%	-0.30%	0.35%
Municipal Bond	4.03%	1.71%	3.00%

The belly of the Treasury curve between 2- and 10-year maturities rallied heavily on lower-than-expected inflation reports. Yields for the 2-year and 5-year fell 22 basis points (bps) and 23.7 bps, respectively. The 10-year fell 18.3 bps. Lower inflation is supportive of bonds because inflation erodes the attractiveness of the fixed coupon payments issued by these investments. Mortgages and municipals were also buoyed by lower inflation, meaning potentially lower rates and broader support.

>> The Takeaway

- Small-caps and international equities found a reprieve in lower inflation reports.
- Treasuries continued their rally from mid-October.

Looking Ahead

Despite the Thanksgiving holiday, this week will be full of important economic data releases. They will focus on existing home sales, durable goods orders, and consumer sentiment.

- On Tuesday, we expect the release of existing home sales for October and minutes from the November meeting of the Federal Open Market Committee (FOMC). Sales of existing homes are set to fall for the fifth consecutive month because of a combination of high mortgage rates, low supply of homes for sale, and high prices. FOMC minutes will be widely monitored for hints on the path of interest rate policy.
- On Wednesday, durable goods orders for October and the preliminary University of Michigan consumer sentiment survey for November will be released. Headline durable goods orders are expected to slow in October, whereas core orders are expected to increase modestly. The first estimate for consumer sentiment in November is set to show slightly higher confidence. If estimates hold, it would break a four-month streak with declining confidence.
